

Introduction

This is where I will be introducing my project. Similar to the presentation, I will tell a little bit about how I got into this project and what Critical Resistance is. I will define any definitions, such as TGI (Transgender, Gender-Diverse, and Intersex).

Importance

I will provide the context for my project, including the statistics from my presentation about the higher level of discrimination against Transgender individuals. I will explain to the audience why we should care about this project and who this project will impact.

Goals

My main capstone goal will be here. I hope to create an easily accessible toolbox for Transgender incarcerated individuals. I could have more specific goals as well, like creating a resource where people can look up this or that.

Ethics

I think it is important to emphasize and normalize discussing ethics in Data Science because it is often forgotten. I would at least want to mention the human impacts this project could have on vulnerable people, and that is something I kept in mind the entire semester.

Process

In this section, I will detail my process, including the research of the organization as well as the code for the toolbox. It will be pretty extensive.

Final Product

I will present the final product, including the link to the toolbox, or at least a video of me using it.

Discussion

Here I will reflect on the project and discuss any struggles, limitations, or aspects of the product I still need to improve. This project will likely continue after the semester ends, so I will note this as well and write what I plan to do.